JUNIOR COLLEGE OF SAINT GENEVIEVE-OF-THE-PINES
Asheville, North Carolina

The Editor's Prologue

Within our hearts, we, the students of Saint Genevieve-of-the-Pines have the knowledge that ahead of us are great days and dark days. To gather the tools with which to face these days, we have spent hours of work and study here. We have worked hard, and we have worked together to form firm and concrete friendships that will last through the years to come. With friends and knowledge we will have a combination that is the ideal of ambitious youth.

Since America is now the arsenal for democracy, we all will find our place in the greatest endeavor any generation has been asked to put forth. No longer close together under the shelter of our Alma Mater, we will scatter to find our calling.

Wherever we go, no matter how far we go or how useful we prove to be, this Echo of the Pines will bind us together, and remind us of our school, our friends and the ideals for which Saint Genevieve-of-the-Pines stands now and forever.

The College of Saint Genevieve-of-the-Pines

The College of St. Genevieve-of-the-Pines is situated among the picturesque Blue Ridge Mountains of Western North Carolina on an extensive campus which is favorable for study, health, and comfort. Conveniently near, yet away from the noise and distraction of the city, the student has all the advantages and conveniences of the town and all the quiet and freedom of the country.

The College of St. Genevieve-of-the-Pines seeks not only instruction, but education. Education implies a disciplined mind and heart; but discipline involves standards, and the application of standards implies rules. The College rules are few but essential, and they are obligatory for all. They allow ample scope for individual development and initiative, but at the same time they safeguard the best interests of the whole student body.

The specific function of this College, is the preservation and development of the intellectual tradition of Christian culture, and the means to this end is the intellectual training of students that they may "advance in wisdom."

Winter - 1941

The winter came with rain and snow,
With brightly colored leaves before;
The mountains and their valleys low
Told wonders of great nature's lore.
Cold winds and frost and blustery nights
Were softened still by rays of sun
Which failed not to uphold the rights
Of God's sweet world till war is done.
The snow clad peaks now spurn with right
The men below struggling with might
Who overlook God's lovely fall
To listen to war's loud and fateful call.

—Mary Lou Marshall.

Remember Pearl Harbor!

"Remember the Alamo". That phrase has rung in the heads of thousands of school boys and girls as they pictured the terrific battle that was to end in tragedy and defeat. But that was in the years of Indian raids and buffalo herds—in the days of the Golden West. It was long ago.

A little nearer our time, another expression clung to everyone's tongue: "Remember the Maine". That, too, symbolized a major calamity in the history of this country, but it became a spur to our fighting men. It served its purpose for we won the struggle.

Now there is a new phrase—one that isn't in the fifth grade history book. Yet the boys and girls know it better than they do the older ones. To them the attack which gave birth to it was a personal insult. Those beautiful islands which Magellan saw—which have been the scene of many an adventure book—have been scarred by the heels of the treacherous enemies.

To these imaginative school children—to all people who hold freedom dear—the words burned deepest on their hearts, are "Remember Pearl Harbor".

The official meeting time is the second Thursday of each month at 7:30 p. m. The minor social affairs were bridge parties and weiner roasts; while the major activities of the year were the open house, Christmas party, and the picnic for the sophomores at the end of the year.

1—Freshmen remember? 2—Then the snow came. 3—Stingy Bunch! 4—Look at the pretty scenery! 5—Smiles and Dimples. 6—This is the making of Dumbo. 7—Which one is Superman? 8—Girl Sprouts. 9—Tripping the light fantastic. 10—Everybody is invited. 11—Some tricksters in the crowd. 12—Bump on a log. 13—Yes, they were posing.
